Version 2014b
from December 16, 2014

1 Introduction & Citation

The Manifesto Project Dataset was originally created by the Manifesto Research Group (MRG) in the late 1970s and the 1980s. The work was continued under the name Comparative Manifestos Project (CMP) at the WZB Berlin Social Science Center in the 1990s and 2000s. Since 2009 the dataset is updated, improved and extended by the project Manifesto Research on Political Representation (MARPOR) funded by the German Research Foundation (DFG) and is still located at the WZB Berlin Social Science Center.

Please check our website for the newest version and more precise information about the coding procedure (coding handbook):

3.2 Coding and data quality variables

codetid	Identification number of coder, three digit code: First digit: 1.. MRG/CMP group member 2.. hired coder 8.. specifically trained coder 998 not applicable 999 missing information manual	Codings based on manual version ... 0 no manual 1 manual version 1 2 manual version 2 3 manual version 3 4 manual version 4 998 not applicable 999 no information whether a handbook was used or not coderyear	Year during which codings took place . missing information / not applicable (e.g. for progtype = 3 or progtype = 99)
testresult	Result of entry test as given in coding handbook: test of reliability in comparison to the master copy, Krippendorff's Alpha for ordinal data: -1.00 very bad +1.00 very good . not applicable (e.g. progtype = 3) / missing information) Missing for early project phase / members of the Manifesto Research Group (MRG).

3.3 Electoral data variables

pervote	Percentage of votes gained by each party. In case of mixed electoral systems with a proportional and majoritarian component, pervote indicates the vote share in the proportional component. In case of an electoral coalition where programs for all members of the coalition and the coalition were coded, pervote for the coalition program is set to zero so that the sum of pervotes is not higher than 100%. . missing information coded

	Not available for Northern Ireland, Sri Lanka, Belarus 1995 and Montenegro 1990.
voteest	0 original figure from data source/election statistics Indicates that the vote share indicated by pervote is taken from election results and indicates the vote share the party (or party bloc) won at the election. 1 estimated Indicates that the pervote variable is not simply derived by a calculation of gained votes divided by the total number of valid votes. Electoral alliances or an electoral system with regional lists can prohibit such a simple calculation. In these cases the pervote variable is often calculated based on the number of seats gained by a party.
presvote	Percentage of votes in presidential elections. . missing information absseat	Currently missing for all countries except the USA. Absolute number of seats won by each party or party bloc. . missing information Missing for Northern Ireland and Sri Lanka.
totseats	Total number of seats in parliament: . missing information Missing for Northern Ireland and Sri Lanka.

3.4 Programmatic data variables

progtype	1 Program of a single party As a rule, each party issues one program for each election. 2 Program of two or more parties In a number of countries, parties compete as programmatic coalitions by issuing joint programs. In these cases, the joint program was assigned to each of the party of the programmatic coalition. 3 Estimate For calculating median voter or median party figures, missing election programs have been estimated on the basis of available programs whenever a party obtained seats in parliament. Estimates were derived either by computing averages between two adjacent programs or by duplicating programmatic data. 4 Program taken from main party of electoral coalition Especially in CEE countries, parties often compete as electoral coalitions in which blocs of parties receive joint votes and seats, but parties in the bloc still issue separate programs. When the electoral coalition is dominated by one strong party, the program of the main coalition party was used to measure positions of the 'electoral coalition' as a whole. 5 Average of all members of an electoral coalition

datasetorigin

- When the electoral coalition consists of equally strong parties, the average of platforms from all coalition parties was used to measure positions of the electoral coalition as a whole.
- 6 General program
Some parties did not issue separate election programs but contested elections with their general programs.
- 8 Party bloc program
Some party blocs issue joint programs. As opposed to type 2 programs, electoral statistics are given for the party bloc as a whole, not for the single parties making up the bloc.
- 9 Other type of program
Other types of programs not specified by types 1 to 8.
- 99 Missing program
In cases where it was impossible to find a manifesto from the respective party or in cases where content-analytical data from this party is still missing, but will be added soon.

Indicates whether the observation was published with the books Mapping Policy Preferences I or II or with one of the updates since 2009. In case where the programmatic variables of an observation are updated or replaced (e.g. due to the replacement of a document), this variable is updated as well.

Data Entries
per101 – per706

Percentages of fifty-six categories grouped into seven major policy areas. Because of the different length of documents, the number of (quasi-) sentences in each category is standardised taking the total number of (quasi-) sentences in the respective documents as a base. In the data set each of these categories is a variable that represents the percentage.

4 Coverage of the Dataset including Party Splits and Merges

The following list documents the parties that were coded at a specific election. The list includes the party's or alliance's name in the original language and in English, the party/alliance abbreviation as well as the corresponding party identification number. In case of an alliance, it also documents the member parties. Within the list of alliance members, parties are represented only by their id and abbreviation if they are also part of the general party list by themselves. If the composition of an alliance changed between different elections, this change is covered as well.

Furthermore, the list records renames of parties and alliances. It shows whether a party was a split from another party or a merger of a number of other parties and indicates the name (and if existing the id) of this split or merger parties.

In the past there have been a few cases where an alliance manifesto was coded instead of a party manifesto but without assigning the alliance a new party id. Instead, the alliance manifesto appeared under the party id of the main party within that alliance. In such cases the list displays the information for which election an alliance manifesto was coded as well as the name and members of this alliance.
